

4.4 Explaining change

This topic explores how species, living systems and non-living systems change over time. It explores how scientists think the changes happen in global systems such as Spaceship Earth as well as the tiny changes that happen at a molecular level in the cells of living organisms. The topic discusses how humans affect systems and speculates on how our impact can become benign.