

3.5.2 British and international cuisines

Content	Students must know and understand	Suggested application and food preparation skills
Food products from British tradition and two different cuisines. Schools or colleges/students can select different cuisines to study Cuisine is defined as: 'a style characteristic of a particular country or region where the cuisine has developed historically using distinctive ingredients, specific preparation and cooking methods or equipment, and presentation or serving techniques'.	• distinctive features and characteristics of cooking • equipment and cooking methods used • eating patterns • presentation styles • traditional and modern variations of recipes.	• Students should have the opportunity to prepare and cook recipes from a range of countries and cuisines, using different equipment and cooking methods. • Skills demonstrated will be relevant to the task selected and demonstrate food preparation and cooking skills across groups (S1 to S12).