

6.3 Data types and structures	6.3.1	be able to write programs that make appropriate use of primitive data types (integer, real, Boolean, char) and one- and two-dimensional structured data types (string, array, record)
	6.3.2	be able to write programs that make appropriate use of variables and constants
	6.3.3	be able to write programs that manipulate strings (length, position, substrings, case conversion)