

Paper 1: Thematic study and historic environment

Overview

The relevant pages of this section specify the content that must be taught for the chosen option. All of the content for the option is mandatory.

Each Paper 1 option is divided into two: a thematic study and a linked study of a historic environment. This linked structure promotes topic coherence across Paper 1 and aids teaching and learning by allowing the issues studied in the historic environment to be seen within a broader thematic context.

Both parts cover British history.

Thematic studies

The thematic studies require students to understand change and continuity across a long sweep of history, including the most significant characteristics of different ages from the medieval to modern periods. They include people, events and developments and reveal wider changes in aspects of society over the centuries and allow comparisons to be made between different periods of history.

Each thematic study begins with an introductory section called The process of change. This explains the focus and identifies the relevant concepts and factors that need to be understood and applied when teaching the content.

This content is then divided into four further sections, which run sequentially from medieval to the present day. The four sections provide a framework for understanding the option, but should not be taken in isolation from each other – students should appreciate developments across the option as a whole. Each section is divided into three strands, the third of which contains case studies that exemplify content outlined in strands 1 and 2 and provide opportunities to make detailed comparisons over time.

Assessment

Students will be assessed on their knowledge and understanding, with questions focusing on similarity and difference, and change and continuity. This may include turning points (significance), extent of, and causes or consequences of change.

Historic environments

Each historic environment is linked to a thematic study and focuses on that site in its historical context. It examines the relationship between a place and historical events and developments. Much of the content is linked to the thematic study, but additionally some of the content focuses on the place itself.

Assessment

The content is assessed through a question on features of the period and also through a historical enquiry. For the historical enquiry, students will need to develop the skills necessary to analyse, evaluate and use contemporary sources to make substantiated judgements, in the context of the historical events studied. To aid teaching, the content is divided into two sections: the first covers the site in its historical context; the second covers knowledge, selection and use of sources relevant to this historic environment for enquiries.

Option 10: Crime and punishment in Britain, c1000–present and Whitechapel, c1870–c1900: crime, policing and the inner city

Crime and punishment in Britain, c1000–present

The process of change

- In studying the content defined below in strands 1 and 2, students should understand how key features in the development of crime and punishment were linked with the key features of society in Britain in the periods studied.
- They should develop an understanding of the nature and process of change. This will involve understanding patterns of change, trends and turning points, and the influence of factors inhibiting or encouraging change within periods and across the theme. The key factors are:
 - attitudes in society
 - individuals and institutions (Church and government)
 - science and technology.
- They should also understand how factors worked together to bring about particular developments at particular times.
- The selected case studies in strand 3 of each period exemplify, in context, the elements defined in strands 1 and 2. They provide opportunities to explore the operation of the key factors and to make detailed comparisons over time.

c1000–c1500: Crime and punishment in medieval England

1 Nature and changing definitions of criminal activity	• Crimes against the person, property and authority, including poaching as an example of 'social' crime. • Changing definitions of crime as a result of the Norman Conquest, including William I's Forest Laws.
2 The nature of law enforcement and punishment	• The role of the authorities and local communities in law enforcement in Anglo-Saxon, Norman and later medieval England, including tithings, the hue and cry, and the parish constable. • The emphasis on deterrence and retribution, the use of fines, corporal and capital punishment. The use and end of the Saxon Wergild.
3 Case study	• The influence of the Church on crime and punishment in the early thirteenth century: the significance of Sanctuary and Benefit of Clergy; the use of trial by ordeal and reasons for its ending.

c1500–c1700: Crime and punishment in early modern England

1 Nature and changing definitions of criminal activity	• Continuity and change in the nature of crimes against the person, property and authority, including heresy and treason. • New definitions of crime in the sixteenth century: vagabondage and witchcraft.
2 The nature of law enforcement and punishment	• The role of the authorities and local communities in law enforcement, including town watchmen. • The continued use of corporal and capital punishment; the introduction of transportation and the start of the Bloody Code.
3 Case studies	• The Gunpowder Plotters, 1605: their crimes and punishment. • Key individual: Matthew Hopkins and the witch-hunts of 1645–47. The reasons for their intensity; the punishment of those convicted.

c1700–c1900: Crime and punishment in eighteenth- and nineteenth-century Britain

1 Nature and changing definitions of criminal activity	• Continuity and change in the nature of crimes against the person, property and authority, including highway robbery, poaching and smuggling. • Changing definitions of crime exemplified in the ending of witchcraft prosecutions and treatment of the Tolpuddle Martyrs.
2 The nature of law enforcement and punishment	• The role of the authorities and local communities in law enforcement, including the work of the Fielding brothers. The development of police forces and the beginning of CID. • Changing views on the purpose of punishment. The use and ending of transportation, public execution and the Bloody Code. Prison reform, including the influence of John Howard and Elizabeth Fry.
3 Case studies	• Pentonville prison in the mid nineteenth century: reasons for its construction; the strengths and weaknesses of the separate system in operation. • Key individual: Robert Peel – his contribution to penal reform and to the development of the Metropolitan Police Force.

c1900–present: Crime and punishment in modern Britain

1 Nature and changing definitions of criminal activity	• Continuity and change in the nature of crimes against the person, property and authority, including new forms of theft and smuggling. • Changing definitions of crime, including driving offences, race crimes and drug crimes.
2 The nature of law enforcement and punishment	• The role of the authorities and local communities in law enforcement, including the development of Neighbourhood Watch. Changes within the police force: increasing specialisation, use of science and technology and the move towards prevention. • The abolition of the death penalty; changes to prisons, including the development of open prisons and specialised treatment of young offenders; the development of non-custodial alternatives to prison.
3 Case studies	• The treatment of Conscientious Objectors in the First and Second World Wars. • The Derek Bentley case: its significance for the abolition of the death penalty.

Whitechapel, c1870–c1900: crime, policing and the inner city

The historic environment

1 Whitechapel, c1870–c1900: crime, policing and the inner city

- The local context of Whitechapel. The problems of housing and overcrowding. Attempts to improve housing: the Peabody Estate. Provision for the poor in the Whitechapel workhouses. Links between the environment and crime. Life in Whitechapel as an inner city area of poverty and discontent.
- The inhabitants of Whitechapel. The lack of employment opportunities and level of poverty. The prevalence of lodging houses and pubs creating a fluctuating population without ties to the community. The impact of changing patterns of migration: the settlement of migrants from Ireland and Eastern Europe, and the increase in Jewish migration during the 1880s.
- The organisation of policing in Whitechapel. The role of the 'beat constable'. The work of H division and the difficulties of policing the slum area of Whitechapel, the rookeries, alleys and courts. Problems of policing caused by crime and antisocial behaviour: alcohol, prostitution, protection rackets, gangs, violent demonstrations and attacks on Jewish people.
- Investigative policing in Whitechapel: developments in techniques of detective investigation, including the use of sketches, photographs and interviews; problems caused by the need for cooperation between the Metropolitan Police, the City of London Police and Scotland Yard. Dealing with the crimes of Jack the Ripper and the added problems caused by the media reporting of the 'Ripper' murders. The Whitechapel Vigilance Committee.
- The national and regional context: the working of the Metropolitan Police, the quality of police recruits. The development of CID, the role of the Home Secretary and of Sir Charles Warren, public attitudes towards the police.
