

2e. Subject content for components H409/01 and H409/02

The following subject content outlines the knowledge and understanding that underpins this qualification.

The subject content will be assessed across all components. For the examined components (01 and 02), this will be assessed in relation to the relevant set of media products as indicated.

Subject Content
Topic	Key Idea	Learners must have studied
Contexts of Media	Social, cultural, political, economic and historical contexts.	• how the media products studied differ in institutional backgrounds and use of media language to create meaning and construct representations to reach different audiences, and can act as a means of: - reflecting social, cultural and political attitudes towards wider issues and beliefs - constructing social, cultural and political attitudes towards wider issues and beliefs • how media products studied can act as a means of reflecting historical issues and events • how media products studied can potentially be an agent in facilitating social, cultural and political developments through the use of media language to construct meaning through viewpoints, messages and values and representations of events and issues • how media products studied are influenced by social, cultural, political and historical contexts through intertextual references • how media products studied reflect their economic contexts through production, financial and technological opportunities and constraints.