
Example 2Explorative study

Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing is studied and Behn's The Rover is used to provide comparison in a study of disguise and deception. Critical reviews of performances are analysed.

Approximate word count: 1500

Creative critical response

View a performance for which there are reviews. Write your own review of the performance in which you give your own views and provide a response to the views expressed by others.

Approximate word count: 500

Example 3Explorative study

Ford's 'Tis Pity She's a Whore is studied and Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew is used to explore the representation of women. Critical reviews of performances are analysed.

Approximate word count: 1750

Creative critical response

Script a talk to peers on two very different interpretations of 'Tis Pity She's a Whore, making comments on the differences and providing insight into your own critical position.

Approximate word count: 500

Example 4

Explorative study

Shakespeare's King Henry IV – Part 2 is studied and Edward II is used to explore responsibility. Critical reviews of performances are analysed.

Approximate word count: 2000

Creative critical response

Write an outline pitch for the BBC's Shakespeare Re-told series, where you demonstrate how you might re-tell King Henry IV – Part 2 for a 21st century television audience, making clear the reasons for your choices.

Approximate word count: 500

Example 5

Explorative study

Shakespeare's Measure for Measure is studied and Twelfth Night is used to explore how a moral dilemma is presented and the degree to which satisfactory solutions are found.

Approximate word count: 2000

Creative critical response

Identify one scene which directors regard as being problematic on stage. Write the script for a talk to be given by the director outlining the problems posed by this scene and how these problems are going to be explored on the stage.

Approximate word count: 500

2.3 Unit content

Details of learning content

Centres and students are free to choose their texts to comply with the need to include a play by Shakespeare and a further play written between 1300 and 1800.