

Topic 9: Development and human welfare

What students need to learn

Key idea	Detailed content
9.1 Definitions of development and human welfare vary, as do attempts to measure it	a) The different ways of defining development, using economic criteria and broader social and political measures. b) Different factors contribute to the development and human welfare of a country: economic, social, technological, cultural, as well as food and water security. c) Development is measured in different ways: GDP per capita, the Human Development Index, measures of inequality and indices of political corruption. (1) and (2)