

Conflict	Family dynamics	Heroes and villains
Black Watch – Gregory Burke Hamlet – William Shakespeare Necessary Targets – Eve Ensler Oh What a Lovely War – Joan Littlewood The Long and the Short and the Tall – Willis Hall	A Day In The Death Of Joe Egg – Peter Nichols Caucasian Chalk Circle – Bertolt Brecht House of Bernarda Alba – Federico García Lorca King Lear – William Shakespeare Live Like Pigs – John Arden	Amadeus – Peter Shaffer Caligula – Albert Camus Frankenstein – Nick Dear Othello – William Shakespeare The Love Of The Nightingale – Timberlake Wertenbaker

Analysing performance
Learners should:	Learners should know and understand:	Learners should be able to:
- in Section A: analyse two different performance texts, on one of the following themes: - conflict - family dynamics - heroes and villains.	- how an actor's physical and vocal skills could be used to interpret a character - how conventions, form and techniques are used to create meaning - ways in which semiotics are used to convey meaning in the performance texts they have studied - how the use of performance space and relationship between characters on stage can be used to communicate to an audience - the relationship between the actors and audience - how creative and artistic choices influence the way meaning is communicated to an audience - the collaborative processes required to create a theatre performance - how set design, lighting, sound, props, costume and makeup could be used in performance - how to articulate a personal response.	- articulate an informed, creative, personal and practical vision about different ways in which a character could be communicated to an audience, including the physical, vocal and spatial decisions made by an actor - demonstrate knowledge of how thematic elements of a text can be communicated in a performance - demonstrate practical understanding of the significance and influence of the contexts in which the selected performance texts were written - demonstrate a clear practical understanding of how dramatic techniques can support an interpretation of a text for performance - justify performance decisions by demonstrating clear evidence of exploring and developing character through practical exploration of performance texts - use accurate subject-specific terminology.
in Section B: analyse and evaluate the work of others through watching live drama and theatre.	- the meaning of drama and theatre terminology used by theatre makers - how to analyse a live theatre performance - how to evaluate the work of others drawing considered conclusions.	- select and use appropriate subject-specific terminology - discuss, analyse and evaluate live theatre using their knowledge and understanding of drama - analyse and evaluate the acting, design, directing and the characteristics of the performance text seen.