

B: Language in the media This section focuses on discourse in a multi-modal media text and requires learners to apply language concepts and theories to their analysis of linguistic and graphological features. This section is synoptic and will require learners to draw together their understanding of these different language concepts and issues, alongside the contextual aspects of a media text, in order to effectively analyse and evaluate language use in media texts.	Learners should consider relevant theories of language and power, language and gender, or language and technology in exploring media texts. In preparing for this section, learners should explore: • language and power: the ways power is represented in a variety of texts and discourses • language and gender: the ways gender is represented and reproduced in a variety of texts and discourses • language and technology: the ways language varieties are shaped by the mode of communication and how different modal influences impact language use beyond that specific mode.	• show knowledge and understanding of the language levels, including: – phonetics, phonology and prosodics: how speech sounds and effects are articulated and analysed – lexis and semantics: the vocabulary of English, including social variation – grammar, including morphology: the structural patterns and shapes of English at sentence, clause, phrase and word level – pragmatics: the contextual aspects of language use – discourse: extended stretches of communication occurring in different genres, modes and contexts • apply knowledge of the language levels (above) to a range of contexts for language use, including social and individual varieties of English and aspects of language and identity • show understanding of how the different areas of study connect across their course as a whole • apply language concepts and methods of analysis appropriately and systematically to data • apply critical skills in close reading, description, evaluation, analysis and interpretation of texts and discourses • use accurately a range of terminology associated with the study of language • make accurate references to texts and sources • consider the contextual aspects of language use and evaluate language in different genres, modes and contexts • synthesise and reflect on language knowledge and understanding drawn from different areas of their studies of English language.
