

4.10 DIFFERENTIATION

In the question papers differentiation is achieved by setting questions which are designed to assess candidates at their appropriate levels of ability and which are intended to allow candidates to demonstrate what they know, understand and can do.

In coursework, differentiation is by task and by outcome. Students undertake assignments which enable them to display positive achievement.