Magazines (in-depth study)

The magazine set media product, MOJO, is a serious 'classic rock' magazine that targets an upmarket and mature audience, reflecting the context of the economic power of the 'babyboomer' generation. In terms of media industries, MOJO is a good example of diversification. A product with a clear audience address – engaging the passion of music fans who consider themselves discerning – reflected in a consistent media language house style that is accessible for analysis.

Learners must study magazine set products in relation to all four areas of the media theoretical framework, including all relevant theoretical approaches and social and cultural contexts.

Media Industries and Media Audiences

Media Form	Set Product	Guidance on selection of set products
Magazines	One complete edition of MOJO magazine.	Edition chosen from September 2017 onwards (not a special edition) to exemplify industry and audience areas of the media theoretical framework, for example: - the scope of magazine, including type of artists featured - the range and type of articles - audience address - advertisers using the magazine.

Teachers are also encouraged to show extracts of other music magazines of their own choice to learners, to help further contextualise their study.

The following indicative list is given as guidance and is not exhaustive. For example, in relation to media industries and audiences learners must consider:

- the effect of ownership on magazines, for example, the effect of the major commercial publishing companies on the magazine industry, e.g. Bauer
- how magazines are funded commercially and may use different funding models to generate income
- the impact of production processes and technologies on the magazine industry
- the function and types of regulation in the magazine industry
- how magazines can be aimed at a range of audiences, for example, MOJO is aimed at a more niche, older, predominantly male audience with a mean age of 41³
- how magazine audiences are categorized, including how readership and consumption is measured and how audiences are identified
- how audiences may interpret the same magazines very differently and how these differences may reflect both social and individual differences

Media Language and Media Representation

Media Form	Set Product	Guidance on selection of set products
Magazines	Two front covers from MOJO magazine, selected by the centre.	Not a special edition. Covers must be chosen from editions from September 2017 onwards. Each of the two front covers must include as a minimum: • an image of the featured artist or band • Masthead • Main coverline • Coverlines • Selling lines

Teachers are also encouraged to show examples of other music magazine covers of their own choice, to learners to help further contextualise their study.

The following indicative lists for media language and representation are given as guidance and are not exhaustive.

For example, in relation to media language learners must consider:

- how the choice (selection, combination and exclusion) of elements of media language influences meaning on magazine covers
- the relationship between technology and media language on magazine covers
- the codes and conventions of music magazine covers
- how intertextuality can be used to influence meaning.

For example, in relation media representations learners must consider:

- the ways in which magazine producers re-present the world and construct versions of reality on magazine covers
- the choices that magazine producers make when constructing representations, including stereotypical and counter-stereotypical representations on magazine covers
- the ways aspects of reality may be represented differently depending on the purposes of magazine producers
- how representations on magazine covers reflect the social and cultural contexts in which they were produced
- the social and cultural significance of particular representations on magazine covers in terms of themes or issues they address.

Music Video

Music video must be studied in relation to media language, media representations and media audiences.

Learners need to study one set pair of music videos from the list below:

- Wheatus 'Teenage Dirtbag' and Avril Lavigne 'Sk8ter Boi'
- Beyoncé 'Brown Skin Girl' and The Lathums 'I'll Get By'
- Arlo Parks 'Hope' and Harry Styles 'Adore You'
- Tinie Tempah, Jess Glynne 'Not Letting Go' and Paloma Faith 'Picking Up the Pieces'.

Learners need to study the set music videos in relation to all the subject content bullet points listed under 'media language' and 'media representations' topics in the subject content table at the end of Component 02.

In addition, learners need to study the following two bullet points from the 'media audience' subject content:

- the ways in which audiences may interpret the same media products very differently and how these differences may reflect both social and individual differences
- the ways in which people's media practices are connected to their identity, including their sense of actual and desired self.

Learners must investigate how the elements of the theoretical framework for media language are used to construct representations and how they are interpreted by audiences. Consideration should be made of media language elements specific to music videos such as locations, costumes, choice of camera shot, framing, angle, lighting, lip-synching, performance and editing, including montage.

Centres are responsible for accessing these set products. It is the responsibility of the centre to monitor the content of these products and ensure that it is appropriate for their learners.

Radio

Radio must be studied in relation to media industries and media audiences.

Live Lounge reflects the role of Radio 1 within the BBC – to develop public service broadcasting distinctiveness, in part as a response to the political context of criticisms of the BBC's more 'commercial' wings. The format reflects the regulatory need for the BBC to foster creativity and innovation. Radio 1 addresses a distinct segment of the BBC's audience and this is reflected in a distinct mode of address.

Learners must study one complete episode of The BBC Radio One Live Lounge, from September 2017 onwards, chosen by the centre. Learners need to study the set radio product in relation to all the subject content bullet points listed under the 'media industries' and 'media audiences' topics in the subject content table at the end of Component 02.

The selected radio programme must be a standard episode (not a special feature episode) and include a British artist and content promoting British music, including interviews/chat with the artist.

It is the teacher's responsibility to ensure the content selected is appropriate to their learners.

It is recommended that learners are also made aware of the online content of the BBC Radio One Live Lounge to help further exemplify areas of the media industries and media audiences' framework.
