

5.2 Methods	5.2.1	Awareness of Health and Care Professions Council (HCPC) guidelines for clinical practitioners.
	5.2.2	Researching mental health The use of longitudinal, cross-sectional, cross-cultural methods, meta-analysis, and the use of primary and secondary data.
	5.2.3	The use of case studies, to include an example study: e.g. Lavarenne et al. (2013) Containing psychotic patients with fragile boundaries: a single group case study.
	5.2.4	The use of interviews in clinical psychology, to include an example study: e.g. Vallentine et al. (2010) Psycho-educational group for detained offender patients: understanding mental illness.
	5.2.5.	Within the methods mentioned here: Analysis of quantitative data using both descriptive and inferential statistics (chi-squared, Spearman's, Wilcoxon and Mann-Whitney U as appropriate). Analysis of qualitative data using thematic analysis and grounded theory.